[Update] PlantsPack - from 2,700 places in Europe to 33,000 worldwide in 2 weeks, thanks to your feedback

Discussion

Hey r/vegan,

Two weeks ago I posted here asking for feedback on a vegan platform my wife and I are building. You delivered - and we tried to address every single comment.

The biggest change was dropping the social network angle. My wife said it best: "nobody needs another empty feed." So we pivoted to what actually matters - helping people find vegan places. (All other features still exist, but not highlighted much).

What changed since the last post:

- 2,700 places in 29 countries - 33,000 places in 160+ countries
- 50 recipes - 580+ recipes from verified 100% vegan creators only (Minimalist Baker removed after u/veganeatswhat rightfully called it out)
- Removed all chain restaurants - no more McDonald's or Starbucks pretending to be vegan-friendly
- Built on OpenStreetMap - open data, nothing scraped from proprietary platforms
- Added stores, stays, and animal sanctuaries - not just restaurants (Should we focus on more variety and type-specific UX?)
- Added private trip lists for planning travel + public packs for sharing favorite spots

One thing I'd love your honest take on:

We scored ~1,000 cities for vegan-friendliness based on place density, variety, and community ratings: plantspack.com/city-ranks

I'm not sure the ranking formula is right yet. Small towns sometimes score higher than big cities. Does your city's score match your experience?

What we're struggling with:

Some people already pointed out a couple of places on our site that's been closed for years. Data quality at this scale is genuinely hard. We have automated checks running and improving but the truth is - the only way to keep 33,000 places accurate is if people who live in those cities help us flag what's wrong.

Every "this place is closed" report, every correction, every new place added - it actually matters when there's only two of us maintaining this. There's an "Is this info correct?" prompt on every place page - one click to confirm or flag. No account needed for browsing, but signing up lets you add places, rate them, and save trip lists.

Still no funding, no ads, no investors. Just trying to build something we'd want to use ourselves ;)

plantspack.com

P.S. Same commitment as last time - top rated suggestions get built asap.
The last post's feedback literally reshaped the entire platform!

Good to see you actually listened to feedback instead of just asking for it then disappearing. The no-chains decision was smart - nobody wants to see Subway's one sad veggie option when they're looking for actual vegan spots

That city ranking thing is interesting but yeah, probably needs work. Small towns scoring higher than major cities doesn't make much sense in practice since you'll have way more options in places like Berlin or London

Thanks!
We live in quite a small town, where there are 2 places, which seems reasonably ok (at current state of things in the world) for 50-70k people, comparing to 5-10 places for 500k people, so I wanted to take this into consideration, but probably wen to far in this direction. I'm trying to come up with something that will be interesting for people to follow or check ocassionaly that, and city ranking seems like a fun thing, but indeed - the scoring should be adapted and deepen (also still dependant on community and feedbacks that we do not have yet).

One thing that I find missing in the "Is this info still correct?" area are restaurants that are not vegan friendly anymore. Many restaurants in Spain brought vegan options when it was trending a few years ago and then when the demand dropped they started to stop giving vegan options.

I already found one and I marked it as "closed" but you'll probably be confused if you check it.

how to get there. And I know there is a link to a google and apple maps, but this wasn't a problem for me in the previous OSM map, so feels like it went a bit backwards.

For the rest is looking great, I really like your project.

Thanks! Will definitely add the option to mark restaurant as not 100% vegan or not vegan-friendly anymore. This makes sense for sure. Also - the map-related one is definitely reasonable as well -> will try to find the right balance and maybe even add mroe features, so that there will be no definitive need to switch to google/apple maps to get to the place.

Thanks for your support :)

No problem :)

Also on more technical side, I can't find where you can change the password, I forgot mine and I can access by getting the forgotten password email, it is a bit confusing because I didn't realize that I was logged back in after some time, but by not having a way to change the password I'll have to log in in this messy way. I realize it is a "work in progress", but you might want to check it being a very basic thing.

Also before realizing it myself, I tried to get help with by sending an email to support@plantspack.com, the mail was never delivered, this is the return message:

Ah, and also changing the name, surname does not work. It looks like it was saved but if you login again, it didn't. Changing the username seems that works fine, just the name and surname.

That's very helpful.
Seems fixed, but I will do some extra tests to make sure.
Also support@plantspack.com is not work as expected and

P.S. "Is this info still correct?" is already improved, thansk to your previous feedback.

ExtraSpicyWizard • 13 дн. тому

Woah man, you already did all my suggestions, you are something else!

Okay I've tried the "not vegan friendly" button if you want to test that it works fine. The restaurant I reported is this one: https://www.plantspack.com/place/100-montaditos

This is one of the chain restaurants that jumped into the vegan bandwagon on 2021 and dropped everything vegan as soon as it stopped to be trendy.

As for the changing password, thanks for implementing it already! But one last thing, the forgotten password mail doesn't reset the password, it just logins you into the page. And since I don't know what password I've put back on that day, I can't change my password because to change it, it asks for the current password 😅

The place you've marked is removed. Thanks for you contribution.
For the password - fixed and here is how it should work now:

Forgot password email → click link → lands on "Set New Password" page (no current password needed) → set new one → done

But I will also get back to it tomorrow to test sorrowly and make sure this basics are well-covered (probably missed a couple of things during general rework) - thanks for flagging this at such an early stage for us! Probably you saved tons of time for future users and us, managing those requests :)
